It's A Campaign Lie.

We understand that a Mr. Rawls who is canvassing the First congressional district in the interest of Congressman Lester's campaign alleges that the reason this paper is for Brannen, is because he (Brannen) owns stock in it.

We have always been in the habit of speaking plainly and we know of no better way of putting this than to say it is simply a campaign lie.

Mr. Brannen does not own one dollar's worth of stock in this paper and has no more to do with it than does the man who stated this report.

This paper is owned by no stock company and is perfectly independent in politics, supporting for office such men as its editors deem worthy and competent.

We are supporting Mr. Brannen simply because, in our judgment, he is the man for the place, and in doing so, we are untrammelled by any power in Heaven or on earth.—Forest Blade.

In another column will be seen the announcement of Mr. D. Q. Stanford for coroner. If elected he will discharge the duties of his office to the best of his ability.

Lonnie Brannen is marching right on to Washington, and he'll get there too.—Forest Blade.

Remember the registration books will close on Saturday, and if you are not registered you can't vote. If you have not already registered, don't put it off another day, but do so now.

Warfare Of The Future.

Mr. John Brisbane Walker contributes to the Cosmopolitan magazine for April an interesting article entitled "If Europe Should Go To War." Mr. Walker discusses the matter from a purely speculative point of view, and in doing so gives free rein to his fancy. His mind is apparently dominated to such an extent by the submarine and "individual" torpedo boat, that he regards their possibilities through a magnifying glass. He pictures—with both pen and pencil—a huge "ocean grayhound" equipped with a half hundred each of these venomous craft and capable of running away from the swiftest battleship. Such a vessel, he believes, could choose its own time for delivering attack and would have opposing war fleets at its mercy.

Mr. Walker is undoubtedly right in assuming that if Russia had possessed a half dozen submarines in Port Arthur, results might have been very different. But when he branches out into predictions of the wholesale destruction that would be wrought by modern science if Europe became involved in war, we cannot so readily agree with him.

Prior to the Spanish war, Mr. Walker and the Cosmopolitan indulged in very similar utterances; dynamite was to play a preponderant part and troops were to be rushed into Cuba by the hundred thousand the day after war was declared. But "our late war with Spain"—which was the title of the Cosmopolitan's anti-along old-fashioned lines.

And the Russians and the Japs seem to be doing pretty much the same. If Mr. Walker's ideas are practical, why is it that neither of these nations have adopted them? The aeroplane was not doubt play a part in war some day and when it does, was may end. But that day, unfortunately, is not yet.—Augusta Chronicle.

The South and 1908.

(From the Washington Star.)

Clark Howell of Georgia, serves notice that in 1908 the south will present a candidate of her own for the presidency. Just at this time he thinks very highly of Senator Bailey, who is a clean and able man. This is all very well, but there are two things to be considered in connection with it which make it subject to revision.

In the first place the south, in consenting to efface herself again this year, leaves the field to the east, and the east is considering for the St. Louis nomination men like Judge Parker, Mr. Olney, Mr. Hearst and, intermittently, Mr. Gorman. The nomination and election of one of these men would mean a renomination in 1908. A successful administration would make that certain, while an unsuccessful administration would make the nomination that year of so little importance that the south would not care to contest for it. Even the nomination and election of Mr. Cleveland might very well mean another try four years hence. He is in fine health now, and would then be but a little past 70. If a third term should be voted, why not a fourth?

In the second place the south has been in leading strings so long, first to the east and then to the west, that clipping them and going it alone would not be as easy as imagined. She has acquired the habit of dependence in national affairs. She has no national policies. She has taken not only the candidates, but the platforms from her allies as a more matter of expediency until she has been on both sides of every question. She supported Mr. Cleveland and his sound money backers as enthusiastically as she afterward did Mr. Bryan and his free silver backers; and she is applying to the latter now some of the same epithets she applied to the former. This does not make for character, nor would it inspire public confidence as to leadership.

The south has some men who are highly accomplished and very attractive on personal grounds. Mr. Bailey is one, Mr. Williams, of Mississippi, another. Among her older leaders are Mr. Cockrell and Mr. Daniel. But old and young alike identified with her political course for the past two decades, and this leaves them representative of but one issue, and that the nullification of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the constitution. As do their supporters, they view every thing as through the negro, darkly. No southern man will ever be nominated for the presidency until two political parties are permitted to exist down there, until discussion is free and welcome and national policies are examined on their merits.

Robbed The Grave.
A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c guaranteed at W. H. Ellis drug store.

Young Plants

Every farmer knows that some plants grow better than others. Soil may be the same and seed may seem the same but some plants are weak and others strong.

And that's the way with children: They are like young plants. Same food, same home, same care but some grow big and strong while others stay small and weak.

Scott's Emulsion offers an easy way out of the difficulty. Child weakness often means starvation, not because of lack of food, but because the food does not feed.

Scott's Emulsion really feeds and gives the child growing strength. Whatever the cause of weakness and failure to grow—Scott's Emulsion seems to find it and set the matter right.

Send for free sample. Scott & Bowne, Chemists, 609 West 11th St., New York City. Sold by all druggists.

A Letter From Mr. Gibson.

Camden, Tex., Mar. 28, 1904.

Editor News:—It was said by a famous writer "that the longer a man remains from his native country the more he thinks of it, and the least the country thinks of him!" and I suppose that the maxim will apply to me. But when I think of old Bulloch I recollect her as I knew her fifty years ago with my old friends, but now "their graves are scattered far and wide, by mountain, stream and sea," and if I were in Statesboro today I would scarcely recognize a single object to remind me of old times unless it is the old walnut tree. But I have never regretted my coming to Texas.

I will drop this subject and speak of something more practical and interesting. The past winter was unusually mild and pleasant here and the farmers were ready for planting by the first of February, but did not commence until the twentieth, while some waited until the first of March to begin. The winter had been so very warm and pleasant that they believed the freeze would come. Like the old lady who said "When I get better I know that I am going to be worse." But the freeze has not come yet and the first planting is now "half leg high" and ready for the plow. Cotton planting commenced here about the tenth of this month, about four weeks earlier than usual, and that which was planted first is now up and growing fine, but some farmers have held back and will plant just in time to finish by Easter. It is risky to plant cotton so early, but there is also a risk at the other end of the line—a boll weevil—and as the weevil makes its appearance late in the summer the planters believe that if they can get an early start they will circumvent the weevil and have the bulk of the crop gathered before weevil time.

The boll weevil is the abomination of the Texas farmers.

It is my belief that the weevil will disappear in a few years, and my opinion is based upon the fact that it has already disappeared from those countries bordering on Mexico, where it first entered this state and is gradually making its way east like a tidal wave, and if the Mississippi river fails to check its march the other cotton states may be involved, while the belt behind it and where it first appeared will become wider every year.

I learn from the Statesboro News that politics are almost at white heat in Bulloch and it reminds of the campaigns of fifty years ago in which I participated, and I feel like if I were there now I would take the stump for Brannen.

The democratic pot has not commenced to boil in Texas yet, but the republicans are holding conventions; but their proceedings will amount to no more than a few fly specks on a window pane. A large majority of the republicans are negroes. I am, Yours truly, A. J. Gimsos.

Why We Color Eggs at Easter

"The Syrian bulbul (nightingale) has the loveliest voice of all God's creatures and the saddest song ever heard. Shady coverts fringing the Jordan still shelter the bird that sings darkling.

"There is a legend that the bulbul sat in the olive tree in the garden of Joseph of Arimathea, and the night before the resurrection, through the darkness poured out her soul in sorrowing plaint above the still sleeper in the tomb wherein was never man laid. When the first Easter morning broke over the eastern hills the eggs in the nest of the brooding bird sparkled with gold, blue, orange and crimson; and so we color eggs at Easter for a memorial of the lone singer who sang by the holy sepulcher nineteen hundred years ago."—From "The City of the King," by Mrs. Law Wallace.

In Memory of Eathal Hagan

Today one year ago, a host of angels came and visited the home of mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Hagan, and bore away our dear little brother Eathal. He was born Jan. 9th 1890, died March, 8th 1903, making his stay with us thirteen years when the death angel came and took him from us.

When a baby of two years old he was afflicted with epilepsy and suffered with it all these long years when death came to his relief. We miss his little dragging footsteps so much, but his sweet assurance to us to know he is a bright shining angel in heaven today, free from all suffering; yes, waiting and watching at the beautiful gates above for us.

Farewell dear Eathal! Yet again we hope to meet thee When the days of life have fled, When in Heaven with joy to greet thee

Where no farewell tears are shed.

Written by his sisters, Mrs. Aurelia Saunders and Miss Mary Hagan.

Don't fail to see "Pete" tonight.
